

SUMMER SEMINAR on MODERN DEMOCRACY

THE CRITICAL REVIEW FOUNDATION will sponsor an annual Summer Seminar in the Political Economy of Modern Democracy at Princeton University in the summer of 2007. All expenses will be paid for 14 participants, who for three days will discuss eye-opening readings on politics, economics, and philosophy by the following writers:

- DAVID BARASH
- ALAN BLINDER
- AMY CHUA
- PHILIP E. CONVERSE
- MALCOLM GLADWELL
- JEFFREY GOLDBERG
- F. A. HAYEK
- ALBERT O. HIRSCHMAN
- WALTER LIPPMANN
- STEVEN PINKER
- KENNETH POLLACK
- JOSEPH SCHUMPETER
- THEDA SKOCPOL
- ADAM SMITH
- JOSEPH STIGLITZ
- MICHAEL WALZER
- MAX WEBER
- RICHARD WOLLHEIM
- FAREED ZAKARIA

In addition to works of analysis, the seminar's several hundred pages of readings include many articles drawn from the news media, selected to stimulate thought and discussion about how well the theoretical works hold up against the real world of modern politics. The result is an intellectual challenge that, according to past participants, compares favorably to any posed by the most rigorous college courses.

Applicants should be prepared to do the reading in advance, starting in May, and to participate in stimulating Socratic dialogue.
